PROFESSOR IS NOT APPALLED BY SLANG

Does Not Corrupt English Language.

Many Expressions From Sport.

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—"In the presence of slang I stand unappalled, because slang does not corrupt the English language," said Prof. Andrew A. Knobell in an address at the university of Chicago on "Slang, Colloquialism and Standard Usage."

"Slang is not abnormal," he said. "It is a sort of vagabond speech that is all the time crossing the boundary of our conventional dialect."

Among our slang expressions which have their origin in sports are 'to get' by football, "serve up a hot one" from tennis, and "slip one over" from baseball. Other slang consists of extreme and ingenious metaphors, such as the classmate's 'false alarm,' 'he's tanked,' 'flat tire,' 'she's tanked,' 'he's soured,' 'picked, boiled or stewed.'

He said no longer is the commuter "up against it" when he breaks a shoe string four minutes before train time but sighs 'T'm surely shoeted.'

The professor said that all attempts to fix a language must fail.

"In order that a language may be fixed, all the men who use slang must be dead. Only then can the language be permanently embalmed."

PLANS CAMPAIGN TO STOP SCHOOL ABSENCE

State Board of Charities Will Take Action to Compel Parents to Obey School Law.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 26.—Amos W. Butler, secretary of the state board of charities, with the state board of truancy, has decided upon a campaign to prevent the absence of pupils from the schools of the state, also to prevent pupils from attending schools with bad influences.

The board is empowered by law to compel all parents whose children remain away from school, to furnish a written excuse to the board stating the cause of their absence.

According to members of the board the insufficiency of school books does not alone with the poorer classes, rich and well-to-do persons at times failing to provide books. The board can compel parents to buy books designated by the state board of education and if the parents are too poor to do this it must be done through a township trustee.
